Education Abroad: You can do it. We can get you there.

Can I afford it?

You can! Studying and learning abroad are not as expensive as you might think. Virginia Tech programs are among the most economical programs you will find. Through many exchange options, tuition, room and board costs abroad are equivalent to (or even less than!) what you would pay to stay here at Tech. Financial aid may also be applied to Virginia Tech programs, and many additional scholarship opportunities are available.

But I can't speak another language... Can I still study abroad?

Absolutely! Many programs offer instruction in English, even when the host country's native language is not English. And, if you are looking for language immersion, either to learn a new language from scratch or to brush up on the skills you have, special language programs are available.

Will I graduate on time?

Yes, with proper planning. With guidance from your academic advisor and the Education Abroad Advising team, your coursework abroad can transfer back to your home campus. Whatever your major may be, from Anthropology to Engineering to Mathematics to Wildlife Science, you can take courses abroad that can fit into your degree program, keeping you right on schedule.

Plan now!

The priority application deadline is in early January for fall exchange programs and mid-August for spring programs. A wide variety of summer programs are available; deadlines vary. Come in and see us now! There are many many options out there, and you'll appreciate the extra planning time. It's never too early to get started!

Come see us.

We're here to help you sift through the hundreds of programs and to help you prepare, academically and personally, to go out and experience the world. We are committed to helping you take this challenging and rewarding step. We are confident that participating in an education abroad program will help you build your self-esteem, develop your communication and interpersonal skills, and strengthen your resume.

Our advisors will gladly talk to you about program options, the application process and more, and you are welcome to browse our resource shelves:
